Brehm Center for Worship, Theology, and the Arts

Brehm Center at Fuller Theological Seminary trains a new generation of leaders for Christian ministry, equipping them with a creative portfolio of skills and ministerial tools. Brehm Center integrates the academic rigor and theological depth of Fuller Seminary with an understanding of the illustrative and formative power of music, film, and the visual and dramatic arts. The center strives to expand the connections between church and culture and to revitalize worship through the arts.

Fuller Seminary's distinguished faculty and Brehm Center's gifted artists-in-residence collaborate with students to seek new insights into the timeless truths of Jesus, and to express that faith in the voices and media of the 21 century.

Fred Bock Institute of Music

The Fred Bock Institute of Music is the initiative of the Brehm Center responsible for training musically gifted worship leaders and fostering the creation of new sacred music. The institute engages with musicians and worship leaders through graduate academic and co-curricular programs, conferences, and events, such as the Festival of Worship (www.FestivalofWorship.com). The Jubal House imprint encourages the composition of new musical resources for creative worship and concert hall.
